STODDARD'S PRACTICAL ARITHdesigned for the use of Schools and Academies, smbraoing every variety of practical questions appropriate to written arithmetic, with original, concine, and analytic methods of solution, by Professor John F. Stoddard, 254 pages, morreco bucks, cloth sides.

It is believed that thousands of teachers in our country, now using Stoddard's Intellectual Arithmetic with great success, and who have been anxiously waiting for the Practical, have only to examine it to approve and adopt it as the best treatire on arithmetic ever published. Stoddard's American Intellectual Arithmetic hasbeen recently adopted in the New-York State Normal School as the text book in meatal arithmetic, in the place of Colburn's, heretofore used. CORNISH, LAMPORT & CO, Publishers,

CUERNSEY'S HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES. Designed for the use of Schools. This History of the United States, by a practical man, is not only intended to be used as a Recitation Book, but also as a Histerical Reader. The arrangement, the division into three epochs, and the method, are plain and simple, and the style well adapted to the subject. The introductory chapters on American Antiquities and Discoveries in the West, and the Historical Outline of the Indian Tribes east of the Mississippi, with a description of their Languages, Manners and Customs, contain much valuable information. The questions on the margins of the pages opposite the leading facts we consider a decided improvement. The work will compare advantageously with any class book of the kind now in use. The narrative of the Revolutionary War is highly graphic and given with the warmth and feeling of a true parirot. The chief merit of this History consists in the succedutes and incidents being so selected and arranged that, by their novelty and the vividness of the description, they are calculated to make an impression both distinct and permaneut on the mind of the student. We understand the work has been introduced with success into many of our first-class private schools and a number of our public institutions.
